Overview

Deaf and hard-of-hearing students enrolled in RIT’s E. Philip Saunders College of Business are problem solvers, strategists and team players. With exposure to a wide range of liberal arts and science courses, core business courses, a concentration in their chosen major and a full range of experiential learning opportunities, including the cooperative education component, students are ready with the skills and brain power to make a difference. Graduates work in all sectors of the economy including business and industry, government, education and non-profit agencies. They are prepared to work as:

- Accountants
- Auditors
- Business Consultants
- Financial Analysts
- Human Resource Specialists
- Labor Relations Professionals
- Sales Representatives
- Marketing and Advertising Professionals

Cooperative Education (Co-op) Component

Co-op students work in nearly every type of business setting across the country and around the world. Co-op employment enables students to put their skills and knowledge to work at a job related to their field while still in college, helping to prepare them for the world of work and their career after graduation. Two quarters (six months of co-op) are required and are completed during the last two years of study. Students have the option to work at a co-op for 10 or 20 weeks at a time. Many RIT graduates secure their first job out of college with a company they have worked for on co-op.

Deaf and hard-of-hearing students are enrolled in bachelor’s and master’s degree programs in these business majors:

- Accounting
- Finance
- International Business
- Management
- Management Information Systems
- Marketing
- New Media Marketing

The National Technical Institute for the Deaf’s Center on Employment helps deaf and hard-of-hearing RIT/NTID students and graduates with their job search and provides employers with well-trained, highly qualified deaf and hard-of-hearing employees. NCE also offers guidance on integrating deaf and hard-of-hearing employees into the workforce.
